Dear Landmarks Commissioners:

This is to add my voice in support of the Turtle Island Monument before the Landmark Preservation Commission today. The Turtle Island Monument, first proposed in the 1990s by Lee Sprague and Marlene Watson, has a long history associated with the first Indigenous Peoples Day in the City of Berkeley. Your approval of the structural alteration permit (SAP), which is required for its current design, will make possible its timely completion. Please take the steps necessary to move this project forward in order that the history of Turtle Island's Indigenous peoples may be honored.

Dear Landmarks Planning Commissioners,

As a former resident of City of Berkeley, I have been a supporter of the Turtle Island Monument, first proposed in the 1990s by Artist Lee Sprague and Designer Marlene Watson has a long history associated with the first Indigenous Peoples Day, In the City of Berkeley.

Your actions tonight, approving the structural alteration permit (SAP) for the current design. I am looking forward to the completion of this project soon. It is important to commemorate the historical events in Berkeley California in 1992, and recognize Indigenous Peoples, past and present, from this hemisphere-Turtle Island.
I truly hope tonight commission meeting results in your approval on behalf of the citizens of Berkeley.
