

IN HONOR MALCOLM MARGOLIN AND
THE FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF HEYDAY PRESS

WHEREAS, Malcolm Margolin arrived in Berkeley in a Volkswagen bus in the Summer of Love; and

WHEREAS, Malcolm Margolin was fired from his only real job as a park maintenance worker and had to make a living; and

WHEREAS, Forty years ago Malcolm Margolin wrote and published an underground classic guide to tramping the East Bay parks and stored the books under his kids' beds; and

WHEREAS, Berkeley's natural beauty, progressive politics, and quirky individualism nurtured Malcolm's venture into independent publishing; and

WHEREAS, the City of Berkeley has accepted and cultivated the pogonotrophic lifestyle that Malcolm so fully embraces; and

WHEREAS, Malcolm Margolin and Heyday Press have enriched, beyond measure, the City of Berkeley and the State of California, through his scholarship, artistry, and his generosity for the past forty years.

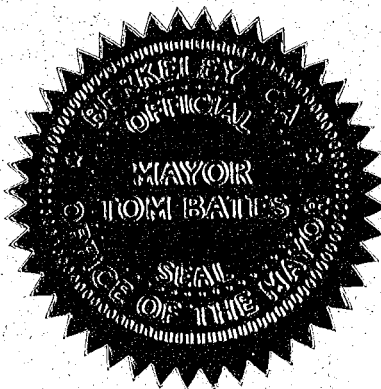

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED THAT I, TOM BATES, Mayor of the City of Berkeley, do hereby honor for his broad and significant accomplishments on the occasion of the fortieth anniversary of Heyday Press.
