

EXHIBITION PRESS RELEASE
Between Cell and Sea:
Art by Kimberley D'Adamo Green

January 24 through April 14, 2015.

(Berkeley, CA — January 14, 2015) The Addison Street Windows Gallery proudly presents Between Cell and Sea: Art by Kimberley D'Adamo Green, an art exhibition organized by curator, Demetri Broxton. Investigating the ecosystems of the Bay Area's estuaries, D'Adamo Green's work explores enmeshed micro and macro landscapes. From the microscope to the naked eye to aerial and satellite photography, why do we see replication of similar patterns across so many different organic forms no matter what our perspective? What can these recurring similarities tell us about creation? This repetition of pattern and shape in nature suggests that the idea of scale is but a human construction. The Addison Street Windows Gallery is a project of the City of Berkeley, funded by the Berkeley Public Art Fund.

Kimberley D'Adamo Green has been an educator for more than 15 years. She is currently an art teacher at Berkeley High School. D'Adamo Green attended art school at Mason Gross School of the Arts, at Rutgers University - graduating cum laude with a B.A. in art and philosophy, later earning her teaching credentials in art and new media at SFSU.
