Dear Landmarks Preservation Commission,

I am writing to inform you of my opinion about construction digging on fourth street. I think that there should be no more digging for construction on fourth street. There seems to be a shellmound, which is a sacred burial site, as well as a habitation site. This is important because shell mounds are rare and we don't want to be building on history as more people come to this world. Again, I believe that there should be no more construction digging because there may be a shellmound.

Sincerely,
Julian
